

Annual report 2016

Association of Charity Lotteries in the European Union (ACLEU)

Foreword by the President

Lotteries are a form of entertainment since many hundreds of years. Lotteries organised for charitable causes also have a long tradition. In the Middle Ages, for example, lotteries were run to raise funds for orphanages or for victims of the Plague. Nowadays, most lotteries are organised by the state to collect money for the state treasury or for other public benefit purposes. However, the concept of a charity lottery is getting more familiar as a fundraising tool for charity organisations.

In 2007 a number of these lotteries united in the Association of Charity Lotteries in the EU (ACLEU). ACLEU is a relatively small association, with 12 members from 5 Member States, in the Brussels arena, but we hope to welcome more members in the future.

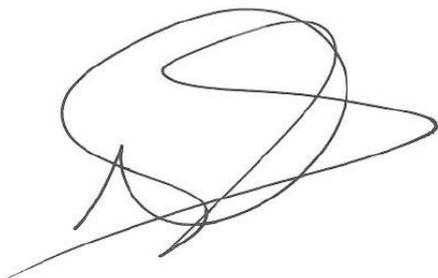

Fundraising is the objective of these charity lotteries, it's their raison d'être, and the lottery is just a tool.

There are only a handful of other privately-operated charity lotteries that exist in the EU at a national level. Most Member States only allow a state lottery to operate nationally whereas charity lotteries are only permitted to operate at a local or regional level. We believe there is a large potential for growth. More than 10 billion EUR could be raised for NGOs every year if all EU Member States would have private charity lotteries.

The reason why our lotteries have been established was not to run 'just another lottery', but to create sustainable funding for charitable organisations. Fundraising is the objective of these charity lotteries, it's their raison d'être, and the lottery is simply a tool. Our members supported more than 300 NGOs, and thousands of projects, in 2016 with more than € 600 million by selling lottery tickets. Funds that would otherwise just lay out there and that are additional to state subsidies and private donations.

The coming years we will continue to raise awareness among politicians, policy makers and NGOs throughout Europe for this unique fundraising tool.

Wim Jacobs

President ACLEU

Turning chance into change

What is the Association of Charity Lotteries in the EU (ACLEU)?

In 2007 a number of charity lotteries joined forces and established the Association of Charity Lotteries in the European Union (ACLEU). ACLEU is an international non-profit association, registered in Brussels. It promotes the interests and rights - at European level and in the Member States – of:

- Private charity lotteries that are regulated and licensed in (one of) the Member States
- Their beneficiaries: the charity organisations

What is a charity lottery?

- 1) The primary aim of a charity lottery is to raise funds for charitable organisations (the charity lottery is a tool). The fundraising efforts are not used as a mere excuse for organising the lottery, but are indeed the main reason. Therefore, no private profits should be made.
- 2) Following from 1), a substantial part should go to the benefiting organisations. Ideally, the operational costs of the lottery do not exceed 20% of turnover, with the remaining 80% equally divided between donations to charities (40%) and prize money (40%). We have to take into account however that these percentages depend on the maturity of the lottery, the legal national requirements and the market situation.
- 3) A charity lottery provides institutional support - beneficiaries can spend the money as they see fit. A charity lottery supports the objectives of an organisation, rather than specific projects or activities.
- 4) A charity lottery should be a reliable partner to the organisations it supports, therefore funding should be long-term.
- 5) Following from 4) there is no political interference in the allocation and distribution of the funds – funding decisions are made by an independent board. The most effective way to achieve long term funding is without political interference in the allocation and distribution of the funds. After all, when politics are involved distribution funds can change, especially after elections, in order to match government policies. In our opinion, charity lotteries can best be private organisations and make their own decisions on allocations and the distribution of the funds to ensure that funding is additional to government subsidies, instead of replacing them.

Who benefits from charity lotteries?

ACLEU members support a wide range of NGOs; from the well-known brands as Amnesty International, WWF and Unicef, to smaller local good causes.

In 2016 ACLEU members supported more than 300 organisations and thousands of projects in the fields of development cooperation, social cohesion, nature & environment, human rights, health & well-being and culture with more than € 600 million.

In 2016, ACLEU members supported more than 300 civil society organisations with more than € 600 million

In 2016 we welcomed our 12th member: the Deutsche Postcode Lotterie from Germany.

Where can we find charity lotteries?

As you can see on the map charity lotteries only exist in the United Kingdom, Ireland, Sweden, the Netherlands, Germany, Denmark and Spain (marked in blue).

Almost every country in the EU has small-scale charity lotteries, frequently organised by clubs and associations themselves. Unfortunately, charity lotteries on a national scale are often not able to operate because:

- States tend to protect national lotteries as national monopolies;
- Domestic legislation tends to prevent charity lotteries from “competing” with national lotteries;

The degree of discrimination is very variable across the EU and a level playing field is required.

ACLEU members believe that NGOs in every EU Member State should be enabled to use (national) charity lotteries as a fundraising tool. According to rough estimates, more than € 10 billion could be raised every year to support the irreplaceable work done by NGOs in the EU if all Member States would have private charity lotteries.

More than 10 billion EUR could be raised for NGOs
every year if all EU Member States would have private charity lotteries.

That is why ACLEU has committed itself to promote the model of a charity lottery and its benefits for civil society and we will continue to do so in the coming years.
